PROPERTY OWNERS BLAMED FOR DELAY IN MARKET HOUSE

Best manner, and let the courts appoint a disinterested jury view to its values. Immediately after the suit was filed, there was also filed by attorneys for certain property owners with the auditorium market house act. These attacks were not made because the property owners objected to the building of an auditorium nor because they objected to disposing of their property, but were made in order that the commission, if possible, might be coerced under threat of destruction of the project, into paying a price which they thought exorbitant and which they were unwilling to pay, a price more than the awards of the courts jury of view had allowed.

Your commission was told in advance of the filing of the condemnation proceedings, that such a suit would be filed unless we did consent to their wishes as to price. The suit was made more manifest after the suits attacking the constitutionality of the act had been withdrawn in the event that the commission would meet the wishes of the property owners as to price of their property.

This matter of price should have been fought out before a disinterested jury, and the interest of the project would not have suffered to the whole enterprise placed in jeopardy by having the act itself attacked for a malicious purpose.

Public Should Know.

Thus we have given you the reason for the present holding up and delay in the matter of the auditorium-market house building, and we think the public has a right to know who so thank for this unwarranted interference and delay. The commission believes that the act is constitutional, at any rate since this question has been raised, it must be settled. Otherwise it might be brought up at a time when the people's interest would be more seriously hurt.

The auditorium-market house proposition has been a live subject in Memphis for the past eight years, running the gamut of the various political interferences, and when finally submitted to the vote of the people they declared for the project that they were willing to pay for it, and so expressed themselves by an overwhelming vote at the polls. These property owners knew many years ago the site selected for the proposed auditorium, and it is indeed fortunate that they have seen fit to wait so long to pursue such a course against the will and interest of all the people.

The auditorium-market house bill was carefully drawn and passed on by three of Memphis' leading attorneys, and by bond experts of New York. Since this recent litigation attacking the constitutionality of the act, your committee has received the advice of our present city attorney and his associate, and also the opinion of a former chief justice of the supreme court of Tennessee, Judge M. M. Neil, all of whom assure us that insofar as they know the act is constitutional and will be sustained. Their conclusions have been proven in the lower courts, since we have won in every instance, and now we are doing everything that we possibly can to hurry a final decision from the supreme court of Tennessee.

When this decision is received assuming that it is favorable, certainly nothing else can interfere with an early realization of the hopes and wishes of the people of Memphis to have an auditorium and market house completed and turned over to them for their use. In the meantime all things that could possibly be carried on under the law and hold back as possible. Architect Charles J. Pfeil's plans are working out more wonderfully, more practical and more beautiful than when first submitted. The commission assures the public that every possible attention is being given to the undertaking, that all of its concerns are well in hand, that there was no delay over to the commission after deducting expense of sale, $246,583.01 and that same was deposited in a bank under competitive bidding, and that we are receiving the largest rate of interest allowed by the Memphis clearing house, i. e., 4 per cent per annum on its balance.

Have Cash Balance.

We have paid for the Watson property $110,000. We have paid advance to architect $6,000. The total expense of the commission of every character amount to $136,000. We have in bank at this time $146,750.

In this connection it is proper to mention that the commission under the bill is given the power to employ a secretary at $150 per month. Mr. L. C. Humes was selected for this position by the commission, and voluntarily placed himself on the same basis as the rest of the commission and serves without financial compensation. It is needless to state that he is making a most excellent record.

Your commission has not seen fit to appear frequently in the press. It has been a commission to perform. It is a body of work and not of talk, but we feel that you ought to know these facts, and why we have held them back. We have had some very trying situations to arise, but the way seems brighter and clearer now, save only the suits herein mentioned, and we are striving to so handle matters that there will be nothing but the best of feeling toward this project from all worthy citizens, and that finally we will have erected the big auditorium and market house that will not only fill the great needs of Memphis today, but for

DAVIS ON RAMPAGE

Keeps Court All Tied Up On Case

Tuesday was an off day with Ralph Davis, noted criminal lawyer, and although sartorially Mr. Davis remained as perfect as ever, his temper was ruffled to an exasperating degree.

First Mr. Davis wanted a continuance in the case of Foster Anderson, negro, scheduled for trial in first criminal court on a charge of stealing 90 pounds of cotton from C. W. Butler & Co. But Judge J. Ed Richards ruled that Mr. Davis' client would have to go to trial. So Mr. Davis demanded a list of the jurors, and while a deputy was getting the list, Ralph tore away to the office of the clerk and master of chambers, where David Fontessa, acting as special commissioner, was hearing depositions taken for a Halifax, Nova Scotia, divorce suit. Ralph and Dave clashed, when the clerk and master ordered the lawyer to sit down. Accounts differ as to details, but it is said that Ralph wouldn't sit, and left in high dudgeon. But the foxy criminal lawyer smiled when he came back to criminal court. Forced to trial, he demanded his right to examine each and every venireman separately, and when noon ticked on the courthouse clock, the business of the court still was tied up while Ralph was picking a jury.
